A Note from Michael

Dear Friend,

When the Foundation launched, we promised to focus on the most urgent medical needs of people living with Parkinson's. We also pledged to do so with tenacity and a commitment to maximize the impact of every gift.

In 2015, your partnership — and that of patients, families, researchers and clinicians throughout the Parkinson's community — helped us accelerate momentum in the field in new and invigorating ways.

We still have much to do, but your friendship continues to move us toward a cure. Thank you for sharing our purpose and our progress.

An Update from the CEO and the Co-Founder: Purpose, Partnership and Progress

TODD SHERER, PhD
Chief Executive Officer

DEBORAH W. BROOKS
Co-Founder and Executive
Vice President

Like the synapses and circuits that make up our neurological function, Parkinson's research is a complex network. It relies on the interconnectivity, shared purpose and partnership of funders, academia, industry, clinicians and allied health care providers, and those living with Parkinson's disease (PD).

The Michael J. Fox Foundation sits at the nexus of these groups, working single-mindedly to accelerate progress toward a cure on behalf of the estimated five million individuals living with Parkinson's worldwide. (continued...)

As this report details, 2015 was marked by a groundswell not only of therapeutic pipeline activity, but also of Parkinson's community engagement. Thanks to the generosity and commitment of our worldwide network of supporters, we funded $87.8 million in research programs last year — a single-year record for our organization. And our investments continue to bear fruit in the form of tremendous activity in the Parkinson's therapeutic development pipeline of both symptomatic and potentially disease-modifying treatments.

Today, no fewer than seven disease-modifying therapies (a treatment that could slow, stop or even reverse progression of Parkinson's disease, something no current treatment has been proven to do) are advancing through clinical testing.

Genetics remains the leading path to critical breakthroughs in this arena. In 2015, two Foundation-funded investigations targeting alpha-synuclein, the gene whose protein clumps in the brains of people with PD, moved into human trials. One of these already is planning for a Phase II study. (Read more on page 20.) Meanwhile, mutations of the gene known as LRRK2 — the most common known genetic cause of PD — remain the focus of intense research interest. We are cautiously optimistic that our partners working toward the first LRRK2 inhibitor drugs could initiate clinical trials as soon as 2017.

On the symptomatic front, as many as four new therapies are positioned to come to market in the next two years, mostly rescue drugs to address disabling motor complications, including “off” periods. In 2015, two new treatments, Ryte and Duopa — novel reformulations of carbidopa/levodopa designed to reduce “off” periods — were approved by FDA and took their place on pharmacy shelves. And as this report went to print, we shared news of the U.S. regulatory approval of Nuplazid (pimavanserin), the first treatment for psychosis (hallucinations and delusions) in Parkinson's.

We join patients and families in celebrating these important wins. But we remain sober about the work still to be done, and we continue to look to the Parkinson's community as vital partners in the continuing advancement of Parkinson's therapeutic development as a whole.

As more drugs enter late-stage testing, the need for validated, objective biomarkers intensifies. Biomarkers of Parkinson's would make clinical trials more efficient, optimize the selection of patient populations for clinical testing, and clarify regulatory pathways to approval for breakthrough treatments. MJFF's landmark Parkinson's Progression Markers Initiative (PPMI), launched in 2010, has grown to become the field's premier vehicle for biomarker development. Last year, the study expanded its genetic cohorts and extended longitudinal observation of the original cohort. PPMI has studied a total of nearly 1,000 individuals to date, and its unparalleled dataset has been accessed more than 500,000 times by researchers worldwide. Today, studies using PPMI biosamples are yielding never-before-possible insights into the natural history of PD. For example, in September 2015, leaders of the study's genetics core published an analysis of PPMI data outlining five clear criteria that could for the first time allow researchers to screen for Parkinson's risk and eventually even predict who will get PD.

As evidenced in part by patients' and families' tremendous willingness to take part in PPMI, people with Parkinson's have long been eager to engage in a true dialogue with scientists. In 2015, the Foundation launched Fox Insight, an online observational study and portal for patients to share their experiences and concerns directly with researchers, helping ensure that R&D priorities are reflective of the most pressing unmet medical needs of people with PD. Fox Insight aims to collect and analyze data from thousands of individuals on measurable features of Parkinson's, such as slowness of movement, tremor and sleep quality, enabling researchers to assemble a better picture of the clinical progression of Parkinson's and track its relationship to molecular changes. To date, more than 4,000 participants have enrolled; many more are needed. (Read more on page 46.)

And because virtual research is most effective when it complements traditional “brick and mortar” studies, our Foundation continues to grow Fox Trial Finder, our online clinical trial matching tool. Last year, Fox Trial Finder crossed the 50,000-mark in registered volunteers, expanded scientifically to include studies focused on atypical parkinsonisms underrepresented in research, and enlarged its international footprint to include France. This brings the total number of countries worldwide in which it is matching volunteers and trials to 31.

In addition to tools for research engagement, our Foundation hears every day from patients, loved ones and caregivers seeking community connection and high-quality educational offerings to better understand their disease. We are eager to continue working with the PD community to spread the word about opportunities to partner in the search for a cure.

Our grassroots fundraising program, Team Fox, contributed more than $11 million to our research efforts through thousands of community-based events last year. And we connected with friends old and new through an expanding palette of online and in-person events. The Tour de Fox, a summer-long odyssey brought together more than 3,000 participants and supporters across the United States and Canada, and raised an astounding $2.5 million for research. (Read more on page 54.)

Research roundtable discussions and day-long Partners in Parkinson's symposia reached tens of thousands of patients and families, as did our Third Thursdays webinars, Ask the MD series and MJFF podcasts breaking down the latest news on drug development and living with Parkinson's.

In short, we left 2015 more optimistic and energized than ever by the achievements to date and the possibilities ahead. And we couldn't do any of it without you. Thank you for helping realize our shared vision of a world without Parkinson's disease.

With gratitude,

TODD SHERER, PhD

Remembering a Revolutionary and a Friend

Andy S. Grove

AS THE MICHAEL J. FOX FOUNDATION PREPARED THIS REPORT, we joined the technology and business communities in mourning the passing of Andrew S. Grove in March 2016 at age 79.

A visionary leader who was never satisfied with the status quo, Andy served for many years as president, CEO and chairman of the board for Intel Corporation. He was well-known for his love of challenging assumptions and for motivating others to reach goals often thought unattainable.

Andy was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease around the time of MJFF's founding in 2000 and became an adviser who influenced the Foundation's philosophy of accountability, failure analysis and willingness to change and adapt. We are grateful to Andy for his extraordinary contribution to our mission.

2015 Donor Listing

The Michael J. Fox Foundation's work is made possible by patients, families, friends, researchers, clinicians and companies who believe — as we do — that partnership is critical to driving research advances. This report lists significant gifts made in 2015, and each name is a testament to the strength of this dynamic community. Thank you for helping us move toward our shared vision of a world without Parkinson's disease.

Leveraging the Power of Everyone's Data

—DARRYLE SCHOEPP, PhD
Merck & Co.

“Parkinson’s research is an ecosystem, and The Michael J. Fox Foundation is at its center. In the end, we all want to find a therapy for PD. To do that you need the best information — including about the targets and potential biomarkers. No one company or single academic lab can do that effectively.”

MJFF’S EFFORTS TO FACILITATE COOPERATION BETWEEN DRUG DEVELOPMENT LEADERS —

from biotech startups to industry giants — help clear hurdles to a cure. Yet, data sharing and comparison among companies are atypical for research organizations.

The Foundation’s uniquely solution-driven approach is welcomed by partners such as Darryle Schoepp, PhD, who serves as vice president and head of neuroscience research, discovery, pre-clinical and early development of Merck & Co. Merck is one of the Foundation’s longstanding collaborators, working with MJFF and other companies to support the Parkinson’s Progression Markers Initiative and to determine the relationship between LRRK2 and other proteins.

A 25-year veteran of PD research, Dr. Schoepp first began investigating Parkinson’s and treatments to block the breakdown of dopamine in graduate school. When his mother was diagnosed with Parkinson’s nearly a decade ago, the critical need for a cure was driven home in a new way, strengthening his commitment to MJFF and its robust work bringing competitors together. The Foundation thanks Dr. Schoepp and our many industry partners for their collective support.

Planned Giving

We thank the following individuals and families who have contributed planned gifts and bequests to The Michael J. Fox Foundation as part of our Legacy Circle.

Planned gifts provide a long-term funding source to plan around or leverage immediately that complements our speedy deployment of funds and helps accelerate Parkinson's treatments through the pipeline.

If you have made estate plans that include the Foundation, contact Shirley Nagar at 212 509 0995, ext. 240 or plannedgiving@michaeljfox.org. Learn more at michaeljfox.org/plannedgiving.

A Legacy of Intellect and Generosity

Errol Jacobs 1937 – 2014

ERROL JACOBS WAS A BROTHER, UNCLE AND FRIEND

who passed away in December 2014 at age 77. A high school teacher for nearly 40 years, he was remembered by his loved ones, colleagues and students as a witty storyteller and a keen explorer who loved art, music, vigorous political debate and traveling the globe. Errol lived with Parkinson's for more than a decade before his passing, and arranged for The Michael J. Fox Foundation to become a beneficiary of his estate.

A committed philanthropist, Errol believed that a search for knowledge and understanding in many fields was vital to culture and human progress. MJFF is grateful to Errol, his family and his caregiver for sharing his legacy with us and for their dedication to accelerating a cure for Parkinson's.

Accelerating toward a Cure

The Michael J. Fox Foundation's ultimate goal is the development of a treatment to slow, stop or reverse disease progression. Currently, no such treatment exists, but it is the only definition of success we recognize.

Today, seven potential disease-modifying therapies have progressed to clinical (human) trials. MJFF has lent support to all as part of our high-risk, high-impact approach:

◎ FOUR TRIALS ARE TARGETING ALPHA-SYNUCLEIN, the protein that forms clumps in the brains of people with Parkinson's. In 2015, two companies entered clinical testing: one therapy seeks to bind to alpha-synuclein, preventing its accumulation, and the second introduces antibodies (the body's natural disease fighters) against the protein. Two additional companies are planning Phase II trials of other antibody approaches. MJFF is working closely with each through financial support and/or collaboration on clinical trial design.

◎ IN SEPTEMBER, THE NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH (NIH) ANNOUNCED FUNDING for a Phase III trial of inosine, a precursor to the antioxidant urate. Studies have shown that people with higher levels of urate have lower risk for Parkinson's or slower rate of progression. The MJFF-funded Phase II study showed that inosine is safe, tolerable and does raise urate levels in people with early-stage PD.

◎ PHASE III TESTING FOR ISRADIPINE — a calcium channel blocker currently prescribed to treat high blood pressure — is progressing. MJFF funded pre-clinical work and the Phase II study. In early 2016, researchers shared a record pace of recruitment for the NIH-funded Phase III trial, with more than 300 volunteers enrolled last year.

◎ MJFF ALSO IS FUNDING A PHASE I TRIAL of nicotine patches based on strong data indicating a reduced risk of PD in smokers. The study seeks to determine possible biological connections between nicotine and Parkinson's.

A Diagnosis Galvanizes a Corporate Community

“One of the most difficult things I’ve ever done professionally was to tell my team at Microsoft that I have Parkinson’s. I shouldn’t have been surprised by their reaction — a giant embrace, followed by countless offers to get involved.”

—MATTHEW LYDON
Vice President,
Microsoft Corporation

MICROSOFT EXECUTIVE MATT LYDON'S PD DIAGNOSIS has inspired employee-led fundraisers and in-kind consulting to support MJFF's mission of speeding research. Microsoft employees work with MJFF staff to analyze our website and technical infrastructure to improve performance and speed. The Foundation is grateful to Microsoft, its employees and the many companies who support our mission through donations, pro-bono services and matched gifts.

Seeking a Missing Link in the Development of PD Treatments

THE PROMISE OF NEW THERAPIES IN THE DRUG

DEVELOPMENT PIPELINE has highlighted the need for biomarkers of Parkinson's disease — objective measures that communicate disease risk, onset and/or progression (such as cholesterol level for heart disease). The identification and validation of biomarkers are critical to assess the efficacy of existing and emerging treatments.

To that end, in 2010, MJFF launched its Parkinson's Progression Markers Initiative (PPMI). Five years later, 1,000 people both with and without PD have shared data and biosamples; data has been downloaded by researchers more than 580,000 times. Additionally, in 2015, the genetic cohort expanded. Currently, PPMI includes people with one of the three lead genetic mutations associated with Parkinson's (in the SNCA, LRRK2 or GBA gene).

MJFF also is investing in imaging techniques as biomarker instruments. In 2015, our Alpha-Synuclein Imaging Consortium continued refining compounds with potential to visualize protein clumps in the brains of people with PD. A similar breakthrough in Alzheimer's research has transformed that field by allowing researchers to correlate clinical symptoms with brain changes and to measure the impact of therapies on the underlying disease process. In 2016, MJFF's Imaging Consortium moves closer to testing its lead compound in humans.

Through PPMI, the Imaging Consortium and novel discovery techniques, the Foundation drives the development of methods to learn more about Parkinson's disease and to hasten treatments to patients' hands.

A FUTURE WITHOUT PARKINSON'S

MOVIE FANS, FRIENDS OF THE MICHAEL J. FOX FOUNDATION and the Parkinson's community converged on cinemas, social media and grassroots gatherings across the globe on October 21, 2015 — the date on which Marty McFly (Michael J. Fox) and Dr. Emmett "Doc" Brown (Christopher Lloyd) arrive to the future in the second installment of the iconic Back to the Future (BTTF) trilogy.

In addition to puffer vests, BTTF Day inspired conversation on the state of Parkinson's research (see a Presidential exchange on Twitter on page 7) and an outpouring of support for the Foundation.

The fun with a cause continues in 2016 with Nike's lottery-based release of a limited-edition run of self-lacing MAG shoes to benefit the Foundation. (The 2011 release of the non-self-lacing MAG shoes raised $4.7 million for MJFF, which was matched by the $50 million Brin Wojcicki Challenge).

MJFF thanks all who helped turn the world's BTTF Day spotlight on the passion and resolve of the PD community.

Remembering Tom Picone

“We want Tom’s legacy to be a part of the work that can yield a cure for Parkinson’s and other neurological diseases.”

—CLAIRE PICONE

THOMAS PICONE WAS A FOUNDING MEMBER OF THE MJFF PATIENT COUNCIL and a leader in drug development. Tom passed away in October 2015 at age 61.

A PhD in biochemistry, Tom was a pharmaceutical executive, most recently at Schering-Plough. After his diagnosis, he shared that he was living with PD with colleagues and peers at an industry conference. He continued to foster collaboration across industry partners as a strategic adviser to MJFF.

Tom was remembered for his intelligence and commitment to fueling scientific achievement by his wife, Claire, and dozens of family, friends and colleagues who gave to MJFF in his memory. We thank them for sharing their memories and supporting vital Parkinson’s research.

Recurring Gifts

We thank the following individuals for their continuous support of the Foundation through recurring donations in 2015. These ongoing gifts help us propel research forward.

A Heart and Spirit for Giving

“It’s important for us to give back, to try to find a cure and the answers eluding families. If you have a heart and spirit for giving, MJFF is an easy choice to help facilitate that critical research.”

—MARTI TONER

MARTI AND MATT TONER SHARE A STRONG COMMITMENT TO FAMILY and to supporting Parkinson’s research. Marti’s grandmother lived with young-onset PD. She remembers her grandmother’s love of cooking and managing a card shop, how her PD progression made these pursuits challenging and her own mother’s role as caregiver. Soon after they met, Matt learned about Marti’s connection to Parkinson’s and how little attention PD research was receiving at the time. At their wedding, Marti and Matt donated to the Foundation in lieu of giving favors. More recently, they support MJFF through monthly gifts. They appreciate the ease of this giving option and the regular updates they receive about how their support is helping accelerate improved PD treatments.

Team Fox

In 2015, Team Fox members collectively raised a record-breaking $11.5 million for research. Fueled by the generosity of an anonymous donor, 100 percent of Team Fox proceeds go directly to MJFF research programs.

Team Fox friends, families, companies and groups create fundraisers, take on athletic challenges and activate their communities behind our cause. With their energy, passion and dedication, great strides are being made to speed a cure for Parkinson's.

Team Fox Teams

Team Fox is grateful to the groups of friends, families and colleagues who came together to drive many of our most successful fundraisers. These groups possess an extraordinary commitment to accelerating research and were collectively responsible for raising more than one-third of Team Fox revenue in 2015.

Mobilizing the PD Community Online

TEAM FOX IS JUST ONE WAY THAT PEOPLE LIVING WITH PARKINSON'S AND LOVED ONES CAN ENGAGE WITH MJFF'S WORK. THEY ALSO HAVE A CRITICAL ROLE in helping speed a cure through research participation. And MJFF continues to provide new opportunities to infuse research priorities and design with the patient's voice, including through technology-enabled solutions.

In March, the Foundation launched Fox Insight, a virtual clinical trial and portal for volunteers to contribute data, including how "off" periods impact daily activities and non-motor symptoms may shift over time. Participants add to a vast dataset from the convenience of their own homes, helping researchers identify medical needs and reliable measures of the disease. Data collected through Fox Insight is de-identified and will be made available to researchers worldwide for independent study.

More than 4,000 people to date have contributed data via home computer, mobile phone or smartwatch that can help speed research. Volunteers also can use Fox Insight to optimize their care by tracking symptom frequency and severity for clinician visits, helping them provide a clear snapshot of their PD.

Honoring Revolutionary Thinking and Leadership in the Field

IN 2015, THE MICHAEL J. FOX FOUNDATION HONORED RESEARCHERS whose achievements have had a profound impact on the Parkinson's research field and whose work and leadership continue to propel advances and discovery throughout neurology and the life sciences.

John Hardy, PhD, was recognized with the Robert A. Pritzker Prize for Leadership in Parkinson's Research in April 2015. Dr. Hardy was saluted for his work uncovering the role of genetics in Parkinson's disease and for his commitment to mentoring PD researchers. The $100,000 prize was established in honor of Robert Pritzker, the industrialist, entrepreneur and philanthropist. In November, Dr. Hardy's contributions to Alzheimer's research were recognized with the $3 million Breakthrough Prize in Life Sciences, given by technology entrepreneurs to extraordinary scientific leaders.

In May, the inaugural Bachmann-Strauss Prize for Excellence in Dystonia Research was conferred on Xandra O. Breakefield, PhD, for her pioneering research in genetics leading to better diagnosis and treatment of dystonia, the third most common movement disorder. The $100,000 prize was created through the collaborative research alliance between MJFF and The Bachmann-Strauss Dystonia and Parkinson Foundation.

Eugene Johnson, PhD, received the Langston Award, given annually to an MJFF adviser who displays outstanding commitment to MJFF's mission and named for Dr. James Langston, the Foundation's first chief scientific adviser. In addition to his contributions to the understanding of nervous system cells, Dr. Johnson served as the head of MJFF's Scientific Advisory Board for nine years, counseling research staff in shaping research priorities. Upon receiving the award in May, Dr. Johnson requested that the accompanying $25,000 grant be directed to PD research efforts at Washington University School of Medicine, where he has served on the faculty since 1976.

Tour de Fox

In the summer of 2015, thousands from the Parkinson's community took part in the Tour de Fox — a 103-day cycling and climbing journey across the United States and Canada. All proceeds from the Tour went directly to research efforts.

Thank you to all who biked, climbed or donated with us along this journey.

A special thanks is owed to Board members whose extraordinary support of the Tour helped unite the PD community: Lee Fixel, Nelle Fortenberry, Amar Kuchinad, Woody Shackleton, Rick Tigner and Sonny Whelen.

Learn more about the Tour and the 2016 Series at tourdefox.org.

MJFF staffer and ultra-athlete Sam Fox (no relation to Michael J. Fox) was inspired to lead the Tour by his mother, Lucy, who has lived with PD for more than 15 years.

2015 Financial Highlights

At The Michael J. Fox Foundation, we take our responsibility to our donors seriously, and we are grateful that you choose to support our mission to speed a cure for Parkinson's.

SINCE WE OPENED OUR DOORS in 2000, accountability, transparency and efficiency have been core values of our Foundation. We seek to maximize the generosity of our supporters and to accelerate high-impact science: 89 cents of every dollar we spend goes directly to research programs.

Though we have funded more than $600 million in research to date, we don't measure success in dollars spent. We continue to push forward toward the day when we reach our ultimate goal of a cure, and we close our doors.

We can't do it alone, and we thank you for every gift to help drive medical solutions to benefit patients and families. The 2015 financial highlights follow.

With this year's annual report, we are moving to a digital version as part of our commitment to putting as many dollars toward research as possible. The online report, full audited financials and our most recent IRS Form 990s are available at michaeljfox.org/annualreport.

2015 Financial Highlights Canada

Since our launch in 2000, The Michael J. Fox Foundation has received a steady outpouring of Canadian support. Canadian researchers have been actively involved in our scientific agenda since the earliest days, and individuals from all over the country have invested in our research efforts or joined Team Fox. MJFF officially registered as a Canadian charity in 2009.
